Readings

Romans 6:12-23

We, who are accustomed to seeing ourselves as free, autonomous individuals making our own choices, find this passage's talk of slavery difficult. Yet it points to a truth: we are all enslaved to something, we are influenced in what we think and how we behave. When we choose to accept God, the freedom we receive is the freedom to serve, which may seem to some like another form of slavery, sets us free to become truly ourselves and to flourish.

Matthew 10:40-42

Jesus stresses the rewards and the joys that come from welcoming, receiving and giving even the smallest act on behalf of the littlest members of the community. The disciples are called to be prophets: to speak a word from God; to be righteous; to act with justice and mercy; and to accept that they are dependent both on God and on one another and so live in solidarity with the needy and vulnerable.
